INTERVIEW WITH LI HUNG-CHANG.

Sir Joseph W. Pease, M.P., has just receive a letter from Mr. William, Jones, late secretary of the Peace Society (dated Tientsin, China, July Oth), recording an interview which the latter had with Li Hung-Chang. Mr. Jones states that his main object in going to Tientsin was to instruct this influential ruler in the recent progress in the Western world of the principle of arbitration as a substitute for war. The letter continues:—"In answer to a question from ma the Vicercy said that China would be prepared to unite with other Powers in such a league or treaty of peace, as had been proposed between England and America." He added that China had always been pacifically disposed, and that unless molested by other Powers, she would not fight. On my asking whether the views and policy of the young Emperor work equally pacific, he replied that the Emperor principles were identical with his own Further conversation then followed shout High Court of Arbitration, and the Vicerov appeared much impressed with the fact that no fewer than 60 instances, during the present century international disputes have been settled by the peaceful means of arbitration or mediation. referred him especially to the well-known Alabama case, which had led to such excellent political relations between the United States and Great Britain. The Vicercy asked if I had seen General Grant, of whom he entertained and ex pressed a high opinion. I said that although had not had the pleasure of meeting. General Grant, yet I might mention that he had often expressed his detestation of war and his desire that arbitration might become a substitute for it. Moreover, when he was in England, being offered the spectacle of a grand military review he had declined the honour, saying that he had seen too much of that sort of thing. "The Vicercy next inquired if I was again
